

How does it feel when you get hurt? When you see other people get hurt? Do you think it was scary for the Egyptians to see the water turn to blood?

The frogs were everywhere. How would it feel to have no escape, no rest, nowhere to be with your family and feel safe ?

Can you imagine lice taking over all the people and animals? They may have been so tiny you could not see them easily but you could feel what they do--the constant itching and swelling. Lice could get in your nose and ears and if they got in your eyes they could cause injury. What would it feel like to be constantly itching?

How would you feel if your town was overrun by wild beasts? What would you do if you didn't feel safe anywhere?

If you depended on cows for food and milk and then they all got sick and died, how would you feel?

Boils are large painful oozing pustules. Imagine having boils all over your body, face and the bottoms of your feet. Would you be able to walk and move? How would you go about your day if you were in so much pain and can't move?

What would happen if a horrible hail storm struck down all the crops? Would you feel scared of the storm? How would you get food after the storm passed?

If you saw a massive swarm of locusts, so many that they blotted out the sky, how would you feel? What about when they ate all of the trees that were still standing?

Have you ever been in darkness so total you can't see anything, even after your eyes adjust to being in the dark? How would you move? How would you make food and tend to yourself and others?

We know how sad it is when a person dies. How do you think the Egyptians felt when their children died?
